Was there anything that worked particularly well with the course?

- I really liked the filmed conversation. maybe also allow for questions to be asked and answered within a period.
- The topic is definitely relevant for my work (and the work of anyone working within the humanities and social sciences), and I think a lot of the discussions were facilitated well.
- I would like to congratulate the course organizers and thank them for their efforts to make everything go smoothly. Especially regarding the discussion groups.
- The well-structured and not too lengthy online videos and lectures.
- the online lectures went very well

Do you have any suggestions for improvements in the course?

- More films for preparations.
- - The syllabus was not clearly enough tied to the teaching. I didn't see the connection between the theoretical syllabus and the practical application of this theory in each student's project. - Information about the exam was not made available enough for the students. There should be written information available to the students about what is required and what the question to answer is.
- I believe that the lectures last too long compared to the novel information they actually contain and that the duration should be substantially reduced. Academics at a doctoral level are already familiar with these issues more often than not. A reason why I felt lucky that we had to watch pre-recorded classes was that I could skip parts with known concepts and save time. Having seen the actual timetables, I would strongly recommend that the lecture content be summarized, should the in-person classes return next year. The course is dealing with interesting topics and offers for heated debates and constructive dialog; and it is truly a shame that it easily ends up repetitive and unchallenging.
- It would have been great to have received more detailed information about the course before the end of the semester since it was rescheduled to the first week of the new semester. It felt very last minute as what assignments/readings had to be done in preparation, date for delivery of exam paper etc, but most importantly, the time schedule. All that information came very late.
- Physical seminars when possible. Zoom-meetings are not the optimal way of learning. Discussions of text-drafts in group for the exam (as opposed to oral presentation only).
